Introduction

The Co-Create Arts Ottawa initiative unveiled a vibrant, value-led vision for Arts Governance and Inclusive Volunteerism, grounded in the lived experiences of artists and cultural practitioners. Rather than leadership, and belonging all of whom

Arts Ottawa is committed to driving change through a collaborative and inclusive model, bringing together artists, cultural workers, and community members to co-create solutions for sustainable governance and volunteer engagement. This approach ensures that the voices of those most affected by these issues are at the centre of decision-making, leading to practical, artist-driven solutions that can be implemented and scaled across the arts ecosystem.

To facilitate deep, meaningful discussions, Arts Ottawa organized a series of Learning Labs (LLs), cultural workers, and community members) will work together in co-learning and co-creation Labs (CCLs). These sessions will explore challenges, share best practices, and collaboratively develop innovative solutions for governance and volunteer engagement.

The end aim to design a governance model rooted in shared leadership, care, and community, while also

- Equity is not a value – It is a practice. From decision-making to volunteer engagement, governance must be rooted in equity, access, and justice.
- Artists are not volunteers – They are leaders. Their cultural knowledge and creative labour must be valued, compensated, and shared.
- Shared governance is not optional – It is the only way to build trust, sustainability, and long-term resilience of support networks.

Learning Labs

Arts Ottawa hosted three Learning Labs to participate as an ecosystem or creative leaders where artists are at the center of governance. Participants heard from various artists and cultural leaders who shared their experiences and insights.

Key Recommendations for the Learning Labs for Creative Marketing Proposition

1. Shared Governance
   - Power must be shared—not symbolic.
   - Artists must be at the table in governance and decision-making roles.
   - Governance can be flat, rotated, and grounded in relationships.
2. Artists Are Leaders, Not Just Participants
   - Advocacy is rooted in lived experience.
   - A unified cultural voice is stronger than siloed efforts.
   - Artists can lead change in the arts sector.
3. Volunteerism Is Broken—And Needs Reimagining
   - Traditional models don't work for artists.
   - Honorariums, training, and mentorship matter.
   - Volunteering can be a gateway into sustainable employment, not just burnout.

Co-Creation Labs

Arts Ottawa hosted one Learning Labs to participate as an ecosystem or co-creative leaders where artists are at the center of governance. Participants heard from various artists and cultural leaders who shared their experiences and insights.

The Workshop

The workshop was held on April 24 and 26, 2025. Each 2.5 hour session engaged over 40 diverse participants in a series of interactive activities:

1. Volunteer Journey: mapping the journey of volunteers in governance
2. Empathy Map: mapping the current and desired experiences of artists in governance to identify gaps and opportunities in the form of dotmocracy
3. Ideation: Brainstorming solutions to address the challenges identified in the empathy maps. Board of Directors, Core Team, Artists, Volunteers, Community Members, Arts Governing Bodies/Arts Councils
4. Prioritization: Participants voted on the most impactful ideas using a matrix. Key ideas were then presented visually.

Key Takeaways

- Governance is a practice that integrates advocacy, artist leadership, and volunteerism into a shared leadership model.
- Artists must be at the table in governance, not often treated as the collective wisdom of the group.
- Accessibility and equity for the implementation of the governance framework.

Governance Framework

1. Governance Model: Principles and Structure

Arts Ottawa's governance structure is designed to ensure organizational accountability, while fostering collaboration, inclusivity, and shared leadership. The framework balances strategic oversight with operational flexibility, creating a governance model that is adaptive and not operational but relational. It prioritizes community voice, strategic direction, and sustainability, ensuring long-term impact.

The framework includes a Core Leadership Committee that reflects a continuum of involvement and shared responsibility.

A. Shared Governance Bodies

Core Leadership Circle (CLC): Acts as a strategic bridge between governance layers and operational teams, ensuring alignment and collaboration. Responsibilities include:

Community Advisory Group (CAG): Serves as a bridge between the community and governance, ensuring that diverse perspectives are represented.

Governance Committee: Oversees the governance framework, ensuring it remains effective and adaptable. Responsibilities include:

B. Key Governance Principles

- Shared Leadership: Power and decision-making are not fixed, allowing for fluid cases between governance and operations.
- Equity and Inclusion: Bridges across governance layers to maintain alignment and accountability.
- Transparency and Accountability: Ensures that all voices, including those of artists, are represented.
- Flexibility: Policies are expected to respond to each other's input and return to governance for approval.

C. Supported Leadership Roadmap

- Training and Development: Leadership mentorship, peer learning, and governance training.
- Succession Planning: Ensures continuity by developing the next generation within cultural boards.
- Implementation Strategy: Phased approach to ensure thoughtful, sustainable, and adaptive rollout.

D. Governance Flow

Support Recommendations for all groups: Fostering and understanding, safe and inclusive meetings, accessibility accommodations.
